REMEMBER TO MAKE YOUR CHOICE TUESDAY

Hubert Humphrey

Hubert Horatio Humphrey, born May 27, 1911, is an energetic, gregarious and humorous person who loves to chat about nearly any subject.

Once when asked about his interest in such a wide variety of subjects, Humphrey responded:

"You people always write that I talk on every subject. I do. I like every subject."

One of Humphrey's favorite surprises when visiting in a newspaper office is to drop in on one of the various departments and discuss knowingly that desk's special field.

As the 1968 Democratic candidate for president, Humphrey's topic of the moment is election day Tuesday. His role as the underdog in the race against Richard Nixon is a subject dear to his heart, too.

Another is his immediate opportunity of becoming the first in-office Vice President to become elected to the presidency since Martin Van Buren's election in 1836.

Humphrey has been described fondly as the hardest working Vice President in history. This, they say, isn't so much because of Humphrey's abundant energies but more because of a hard-driving boss.

President Lyndon Johnson, whose hobby is work, believed that a Vice President should be an apprentice president since he is only a heart-beat away from the presidency.

So he assigned the 38th vice president numerous tasks within the framework of the Cabinet, the National Security Council, civil rights, space, farm and urban affairs programs.

His most important duty in Johnson's behalf, however, has been service as the bridge between Capitol Hill, where Humphrey presided over the Senate, and the White House.

Humphrey, consequently, believes he has come as close to knowing the requirements of the presidency as a man could without actually being in the office.

There was speculation in

George Wallace

George Corley Wallace, born Aug. 25, 1919, actually launched his bid for the 1968 presidential race in November of 1966. The occasion was the election of his wife, Lurleen, as governor of Alabama.

Wallace had become the state's chief officer on Jan. 14, 1963 and conceived the idea of his wife's candidacy after an unsuccessful fight to change the antisuccession provisions of Alabama's constitution.

He had made it clear to voters during Lurleen's campaign that he still would be the real governor, serving as a $1-a-year executive assistant.

At the victory dinner Wallace, in a tone of nasal menace, said that since the truth (meaning racism) had triumphed in Alabama, he meant to do his best to ensure the same sort of triumph, on a much larger scale, in 1968.

Wallace lost no time in turning his wife's landslide victory into a bid for the Presidency in 1968.

"The people of this country are going to have an opportunity to express themselves," Wallace intoned, promising to campaign "all the way from Maine to California."

He said then that the only development which would keep him from running for President would be for the major parties to change their "socialist, Communist, beatnik ways."

He could hardly have been more precise at this

Richard Nixon

Richard Milhous Nixon, born Jan. 9, 1913, won his first political race and kept on winning for 14 years until he ran for president in 1960.

In that contest he lost to John F. Kennedy by one of the closest popular - vote margins in history, 34,221,531 to 34,108,474.

Then in 1961 he ran for governor of California, his home state at the time, and lost again, by about 300,000 votes to Governor Edmund G. Brown.

Most experts agreed he had lost his voter appeal. His political career appeared to have ended, specially after he upbraided news media and critics at a regretful press conference following his defeat.

Thus, as the 1968 Republican candidate for president

Nixon is seeking one of the most extraordinary political comebacks in the history of the United States.

Nixon's political success basically is the story of a cool, shrewd fighter and an oratorical wizard who conducts a tough, forceful campaign.

He also is a painfully sensitive person, especially when he considers criticism of him unfair.

Nixon believes his personal success story has fulfilled the American dream of any kid, even the son of a poor man, being able to seek the presidency of the USA.

Born in Yorba, Linda, Calif., Nixon spent his school days in Whittier where history and civic studies were his favorites. He entered Whittier College at the age of 17 and won many debating awards before graduating in 1934.

He then won a scholarship to the Duke University School of Law and ranked third in the 1937 graduating class of 44 students.

Unable to find employment in the east in law while the Great Depression still gripped the nation, Nixon in 1938 political circles how the hard-driving sensitive Johnson and the ebullient Humphrey would get along as a team. Humphrey set this at rest with his definition of his role.

"A Vice President will be and is what the President wants him to be, and above all, a Vice President must be loyal," he said. "He must have a quality of fidelity, a willingness literally to give himself, to be what the President wants him to be -- a loyal, faithful friend and servants."

Much of Hubert's difficulties in his 1968 campaign relate to this fierce devotion to his role as Vice President.

Many of his old liberal friends have criticized him severely, mainly for his close association with President Johnson's Vietnam policy. He refuses to disavow that policy, but has repeatedly stated, with some urgency, that "I am my own man."

Friends call him the most creative political mind of the era, and his opponents give him much credit.

Nearly all writers delight in referring to Hubert as a former pharmacist or druggist. The professional has been a dominant factor in Humphrey's life from the beginning.

He was born in a room above his father's drugstore in the prairie town of Wallace, S.D. At age 7 he started delivering newspapers. Three years later the freckle-faced youngster opened a checking account. "I used to write checks for 25 cents and drive the banker nuts," he later recalled.

The elder Humphrey's guidance was instrumental in developing Hubert's interest in politics. The younger Humphrey spent many hours in the drugstore listening to his father argue with the town's Republican.

Learning as a teen-ager how drought and dust storms meant financial hardship or ruin on the prairie, Humphrey in later years stated he "had learned more about economics in one dust storm than I did in all my years of college."

In high school Humphrey won letters in football, basketball and track, played in the school band and sang in the glee club. He was a star debater and took runner-up laurels in the regional debating tournament. He graduated in 1929 as the valedictorian of his class.

His college education came sporadically. He entered the University of Minnesota but had to quit in his sophomore year because of the Great Depression.

Sandwiched between stints of toil in his father's drugstore, now located in Huron, S.D., Humphrey in 1933 obtained a license to practice pharmacy from the Denver College of Pharmacy.

In 1931 Hubert met Muriel Fay Buck at a dance at Huron College where she was a student. They married in 1936 and had four children, three sons and a daughter.

Humphrey soon told his wife of his restlessness, of his desire to finish his education and to enter political life. At Muriel's insistence, Hubert returned to the University of Minnesota and majored in political science.

He graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa in 1939. The following year he taught political science at Louisiana State University and obtained his master's degree. The title of his thesis was "The Philosophy of the New Deal."

The art of government became his passion. His first try at office came in 1943 when he ran for mayor of Minneapolis. He lost to Marvin Kline, but in 1945 he was elected to the office, at age 34, and again in 1947.

During his two terms as mayor, Humphrey successfully drove the racketeers out of Minneapolis. He also was responsible for the nation's first law forbidding employers to refuse to hire a person because of race.

Realizing that the Republican vote was solid while the liberal vote was split between Democrats and the Farmer Labor Party, Humphrey spent 1944 working out a merger plan. It paid off with his election in 1945 when he defeated Kline.

In 1947 Humphrey directed the establishment of the Americans for Democratic Action, a group formed to support liberal programs and to fight communism in America.

Under the party banner he was elected to the Senate in 1948 and re-elected in 1954 and 1960. He quickly became regarded as a "do or die" liberal.

As he matured, Humphrey's personality broke through. Colleagues noted a wide Plains openness, his ready response on every occasion, his humor, lack of style and an irrepressible zest for life.

They noted, too, his progress in the Senate. His early committee service was on agriculture and on labor and public welfare where he worked for education, health and Social Security legislation.

Humphrey then moved on to the powerful committees of appropriation and foreign relations. The nuclear test ban treaty with Russian and the peace corps bills were trademarks of his chores.

When President Johnson signed the 1964 Civil Rights Act into law, he autographed a copy for Hubert and wrote: "To Hubert Humphrey, without whom it couldn't have happened."

In 1958 while visiting in Moscow, Humphrey had an eight-hour interview with Premier Krushchev whom he characterized as an intelligent and shrewd man with a tremendous sense of humor, a country boy who made good."

Presidential office always has been an ambition with Humphrey. He was Minnesota's favorite-son candidate in 1952 and in 1956 actively campaigned for the vice-presidency nomination.

In 1960 he announced his candidacy for the presidential nomination, declaring the Democrats needed a spokesman for the common man, and "I intend to be that man."

Instead came one of the few disappointing times of his political life. After losing primaries in Wisconsin and West Virginia to John F.

Kennedy, he withdrew from the race.

He won re-election though to the Senate where his political know-how brought him appointment as Democratic assistant floor leader or party whip in 1961.

On March 31, 1968, President Johnson announced he would not seek re-election. On April 27, after a bad job of keeping it a secret, HHH declared his candidacy for the presidential nomination.

His chief opponents were Senators Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy, but Kennedy was assassinated in June. Two months later Senator George McGovern entered the race.

However, Humphrey easily won the party's nomination and he chose Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine as his running mate.

juncture to announce his hope of running on a third-party ticket in 1968.

His master plan did materialize into his candidacy as the presidential nominee on the American Independent Party ticket, with General Curtis E. LeMay as his running mate.

The party's line is ultra-conservative. Wallace's success in Alabama politics has been based largely on state's rights and segregation.

Within the first year of his term as governor, Wallace stood in "the schoolhouse door" in an attempt to block Negro students from enrollment in the University of Alabama.

Later he postponed under the guise of public safety the opening of integrated public schools.

After his election in 1962 as governor with the largest popular vote ever recorded in Alabama, Wallace proclaimed: "I say segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever."

Wallace first bid for the Alabama governorship in 1958 but lost to John Patterson by 64,000 votes. He later observed that Patterson had "out-segged" him.

He meant Patterson had posed as a more determined segregationist than he, and promptly promised "it would never happen again."

His successful campaign in the 1962 gubernatorial race was characterized as a one-man army at war with the Federal Government.

In his inaugural speech Wallace restated his campaign pledges and shouted his defiance of federal intervention in state's affairs.

As governor he fulfilled his campaign promise to reduce the cost of government. "I never had money to waste and I'm certainly not going to waste someone else's money," he told the taxpayers.

He put up for sale more than one-quarter of the state-owned automobiles. He compelled the legislature to trim his own office budget by more than $100,000, and sold one of the two state-owned yachts.

Wallace also fought a running battle with federal returned home and joined a law firm in Whittier.

Shortly, he met Thelma Patricia Ryan who was teaching commercial subjects at Whittier High School. They married on June 21, 1940 and had two daughters. Patricia was born Feb. 21, 1946 and Julie on July 5, 1948.

In 1942 Nixon was called to active duty as a Navy lieutenant junior grade. He served in an air transport unit in the Pacific and was promoted to lieutenant commander before being released from active duty in 1945.

Although his resources have been enhanced in the last four years via his law partnership in New York City, his personal worth does not put him in the millionaire class. There's no holes in his shoes, either.

Politics began for Nixon in 1946 when he was invited officers and agents and with U.S. Army troops over segregation. When he couldn't prevent integration, he did manage to slow down the process.

Wallace, born in Clio, Ala., has two brothers and a sister. They were reared on a farm and attended nearby schools. In 1936 while in high school Wallace won the state Golden Gloves bantam-weight boxing championship and repeated the next year. He also was quarterback on the high school football team.

He entered the University of Alabama Law School in 1937, the same year his father died. With limited family resources, Wallace worked his way through college, waiting on tables, boxing professionally and driving a taxi.

Finding time to participate in school activities, Wallace was president of the freshman class, captain of the university boxing team and freshman baseball team.

His most prestigious office in college, however, was as president of the Spirit Committee. Wallace also became a highly regarded member of the Law School Honor Court before receiving his law degree in 1942.

That same year in October Wallace volunteered for pilot training in the Army Air Force. But in 1943 he was hospitalized with spinal meningitis and had to quit flight training because of it.

After recovering from the illness he became a flight engineer on B-29s and performed many aerial combat missions over Japan. He was released from active duty in 1945 with the rank of flight sergeant.

Before going overseas in 1943 Wallace married Lurleen Burns, whom he had met as a student at the University of Alabama. They had four children, three daughters and a son.

Mrs. Wallace died in May, 1968, during her term as governor of Alabama.

to oppose Jerry Voorhis, a liberal Democrat who had won five terms in the 12th congressional district of California.

Nixon fought particularly hard for a boy who had been reared a Quaker. He often employed tactics he had learned as the champion debater of Whittier College.

While Voorhis howled that Nixon was using smear tactics and spent most of his time denying the charges, Nixon was busy making new ones. Nixon won by 15,592 votes.

In the House of Representatives Nixon was proudest of his work on a committee that prepared the Marshall Plan and other foreign aid programs. He also helped write the Taft-Hartley Act, which set up controls over labor, and became a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Two years later he won re-election without a contest, having won both party nominations under California's unique cross-filing law.

In 1950 Nixon ran for the Senate against Helen Gahagan Douglas. Opponents now complained that Nixon was downright dirty in his tactics.

In this campaign Nixon and his backers put out a pamphlet in which Mrs. Douglas' voting record in Congress was compared with that of Vito Marcantonio of New York, a Communist party liner.

The pamphlet, printed on pink paper, said they had voted alike on 343 bills.

Nixon won the Senate seat, and a circle of devoted enemies.

In 1952 Nixon was picked as General Eisenhower's running mate on the presidential ticket. When a newspaperman learned Nixon had an $18,000 campaign fund, Democrats, and even some Republicans, demanded that he quit the race.

After a week of anxious moments, Nixon went on national television and explained his position. In what has been described as one of the most effective soap operas of all time, he said he did have an expense account.

But not one cent, he said, had been used for personal gain. Among other comments: His wife did not own a mink coat, but did have one of good Republican cloth, whatever that was.

The dramatics resulted in forgiveness and a vote of confidence from Eisenhower. The ticket was elected over Adlai Stevenson of Illinois and John Sparkman of Alabama.

Under Nixon the vice-presidency was a busy office. He carried on for the President when Ike suffered a heart attack on Sept. 24, 1955, stepped in when Eisenhower suffered another illness in June, 1956, and again when the President had a stroke in November, 1957.

In addition to other new dimensions in the duties of the vice-president, Nixon served as spokesman for the government in a series of good-will tours.

He visited 60 countries in all, traveling to every continent except Antarctica. He found violence and danger in many places but he met the challenge each time.

For example Nixon found himself confronted by an angry mob in Burma. He got out of his car and shook hands with leaders of the mob, and left them smiling.

In Peru communist agents led groups that booed and stoned him. In Venezuela mobs smashed the windows of his car. The incidents never did daunt his spirit or courage.

In the 1956 presidential primary Harold Stassen launched a dump-Nixon campaign. Even though Ike took a hands-off policy on the feud, it was Stassen who was dumped.

During the campaign Nixon was charged again with taking the political low road while Ike was credited with treading a higher one. The Democratic ticket of Stevenson and Senator Estes Kefauver was the loser.

More overseas tours followed, the most famous being Nixon's confrontation with Soviet Premier Khrushchev in Moscow.

At one point of the meeting Nixon grabbed the Russian's arm and told him: "You must not be afraid of new ideas. After all, you don't know everything."

The diplomats shuddered, but Nixon's boldness won much applause at home.

The biggest obstacle on the road to Nixon's presidential nomination in 1960 was Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, who held different political views than the Eisenhower administration.

But the party supported Nixon and Rockefeller withdrew from consideration. Nixon and Henry Cabot Lodge became the ticket on the first ballot.

The campaign against Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson was hard-fought from start to finish. Kennedy's Catholic religion was a dominant issue but Nixon disavowed the subject and insisted his associates not discuss it. But it remained a live issue anyway.

Kennedy was the victor in the closest presidential election since 1884 when Grover Cleveland defeated James G. Blaine.

Nixon carried 26 states to 22 for Kennedy, but JFK received 303 electoral votes to Nixon's 219. Highlight of the campaign had been a unique series of debates in which candidates argued issues over television.

In 1961 Nixon's victory over Joseph Shell, a conservative, for the nomination for governor of California split the party. It was too much to overcome and Nixon lost to Brown.

Nixon returned to New York City in 1963 and became a partner in a Wall Street law firm. Supporters urged Nixon to run for president in 1964 but he felt the party favored Barry Goldwater and declined.

Lyndon Johnson, seeking his first full term, won in a landslide.

Goldwater's overwhelming defeat put Nixon back into the political limelight. He campaigned vigorously in 1966 for Republican candidates and received much credit for the 58 seats gained that year by the GOP.

For two years he carefully laid the ground work for another try at the presidency. In February, 1968, he announced himself as a candidate. He won on the first ballot at the convention in Miami Beach and chose Governor Spiro Agnew of Maryland as his running mate.

Elect National, State, County Officials Nov. 5

Area voters will go to the polls next Tuesday, Nov. 5, to choose a President, governor, senator, congressman, state legislators, several state and county officers.

They will also vote on a $2,200,000 bond issue to build a Will County Nursing Home; a billion dollar bond issue for the Natural Resources Development Act, combating water and air pollution, and an amendment to the Banking Act which would give state banks power to have foreign branches but not otherwise change the prohibition against branch banking.

These proposals as well as well as the names of the candidates for the various offices will be on the Votomatic machines that will be used in all Will County precincts.

There also will be two paper ballots given to voters. One of them, a blue one, is on the proposal to hold a convention for the purpose of writing a new state constitution. To carry, it must have a majority of all the votes cast in the election. The other ballot covers the retention of Michael A. Orenic as a judge of the circuit court of the 12th judicial circuit, which is made up of Will, Kankakee and Iroquois counties.

The polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Will County voters will elect five officials, state's attorney, clerk of the circuit court, recorder of deeds, county auditor and coroner.

In the state's attorney's race George E. Sangmeister, of Mokena, incumbent, is running for re-election on the Democratic ticket. He is asking for re-election on his record as prosecutor for the past four years.

He is opposed by Louis R. Bertani, Republican, of Joliet, who has been practicing law 17 years. Bertani declares that he will restore respect for authority, contending that a conviction record which does not result in a reduced crime rate is of little value.

Man Dies In Explosion

Lester Gay, 63, of 216 Walnut St., Frankfort, an employee of Walter Yunker, Frankfort Township highway commissioner, was killed Monday morning when a hot tar tank exploded at the rear of the Yunker garage on Front St., Mokena.

Gay was on top of the tank when it exploded. Harriet Bueschel, of 11137 First St., which is west of the Yunker property, told Will County Coroner Willard Blood she had seen Gay on top of the tank and had turned aside when she heard an explosion. When she looked out again Gay was lying in a flowerbed alongside her garage, a distance of almost 20 feet from the tar tank.

The body was taken to Frankfort Community Chapel pending further investigation. Windows were broken in the Bueschel house and in two homes across the street. The explosion occurred about 10:30 o'clock.

involved in the race for circuit clerk. It is between Sam H. Paul, Republican former supervisor of Troy Township, and William E. Smythe, Democrat, Lockport businessman.

For recorder of deeds, Kenneth L. George, Republican, of Elwood, incumbent, is seeking re-election on his record. His Democrat opponent is Stephen B. Luzbetak, Lockport, an attorney.

For county auditor F. Berle Needham, Mokena, is the Republican candidate. He is assistant supervisor of Frankfort Township and chairman of the finance committee of the County Board. He is retired from the Rock Island Lines where he was comptroller and assistant to vice-president of finance. He also served as business manager of Joliet Junior College. His Democrat opponent is Stanley Waznis, incumbent, who is running on his record.

For coroner, William G. Blood, Republican, incumbent, is seeking re-election on his experience and record in the office. He is opposed by Dr. John K. Churchill, Democrat. Churchill is not a doctor of medicine. He is a chiropractor.

The proposed county nursing home is intended to serve the sick, the chronically ill, or inform persons who may become charges of one of the governmental bodies.

To pay off the $2,200,000 bond issue for the home the county would be empowered to levy a special tax not to exceed 3 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation, from 1968 to 1983. This would be in addition to the tax at the statutory limit of 10 cents per $100 valuation, permitted to be levied without an election.

Practically everyone knows that Richard Nixon, is the Republican candidate for president; Hubert Humphrey is the Democrat, and George Wallace, the independent candidate, but some may not know that Henning A. Blumen is the choice for the office of the Socialist Labor party.

U.S. Senator Everett M. Dirksen, Republican, who is one of the most powerful figures in the Senate, is being opposed by William G. Clark, Democrat, who is just finishing up his term as attorney general of Illinois.

Richard B. Ogilvie, president of the Cook County Board and former Cook County sheriff, is the Republican candidate for governor. He is opposed by Gov. Samuel H. Shapiro, of Kankakee. Shapiro was formerly lieutenant governor and became governor several months ago when Otto Kerner resigned the office to become a federal judge. Shapiro was a member of the General Assembly from 1946 to 1960.

Donald D. Carpentier is the Republican candidate for secretary of state, an office formerly held by his father, the late Charles Carpentier. He is opposing the incumbent Democrat, Paul Powell, a former legislator.

William C. Harris (R) is running for auditor of public accounts against Michael J. Howlett (D), incumbent.

William J. Scott, (R), former state treasurer is running for attorney general against Francis S. Lorenz (D) former head of the state department of public works and buildings.

Justin Taft is the Republican candidate for clerk of the supreme court. He is opposed by Fannie G. Jones, Democrat.

John E. Hall (R) is a candidate for clerk of the 3d District Appellate Court, opposing J. Linco Silver (D).

Congressman Leslie C. Arends, Republican, veteran member of the House of Representatives, is seeking re-election in the 17th Congressional District which includes all of Will County by Joliet, Lockport and DuPage townships. He is opposed by Lester A. Hawthorne.

In this area the two Republican legislators, William G. "Bill" Barr, Joliet, and W. Robert Blair, Park Forest, are seeking re-election, as is the Democrat incumbent, John J. Houlihan, Park Forest. The other Democrat candidate is Sammy Berk, former circuit clerk. Three are to be elected.

The other district office at stake is judge of the appellate court, 3d District. Howard C. Ryan is the Republican candidate, John J. Clinch Jr., the Democrat.

L-W Harriers In State Finals

Lincoln-Way High Schools cross country team won the district meet last Saturday and thus goes to Champaign for the state finals this weekend.

Lincoln-Way was host to the district meet, in which Homewood-Flossmoor finished second and so will also go to Champaign. The two top teams and the first five individuals in each of the 14 district meets will compete in the state finals. At the Lincoln-Way meet the fifth place finisher was Grady Manning of Bloom, so that school, Homewood and Lincoln-Way will represent the district at Champaign.

Top man for the meet was a Lincoln-Way sophomore, Dave Merrick, of Mokena, toured the 2.7 mile course in the record time of 13 minutes, 27.1 seconds. Three days previously he finished first in the Southwest Suburban Conference meet.

In the district meet last Saturday the Lincoln-Way team posted an amazing 33-point total (in cross country running, as in golf, the low scores are best). Second place Homewood-Flossmoor had 75. The other teams and their scores at the district meet, in the order of their finish:

Bloom 88; Rich East 113; Rich Central 144; Joliet West 191; Hillcrest 209; Joliet Central 212; Lockport West 275; Lockport Central 294; Tinley Park 366; Crete-Monee 380; Thornton Fractional North 412; Providence 429; Joliet East 430;

Kankakee Westview 433; Manteno 440; Illiana Christian 455; Morris 502; Joliet Catholic 552 and Kankakee Eastridge 623.

Minooka and Peotone competed but had no team scores because each entered less than five men.

There were 160 runners that took off in the district race with Merrick crossing the finish line about 10 seconds ahead of his teammate, Tom Clegg, who earlier this season had beaten Merrick. That was the only defeat experienced by the Mokena youth this year.

A Homewood runner, Blaine Jones, came in third, with Rick Loucks, Lincoln-Way, fourth.

The second five finishers also received medals. Steve Mangun, a Lincoln-Way senior, was sixth; Barry Quilhot, Hillcrest, was seventh; Jeff Wray, Rich East, eighth; Mike Klema, Rich East, ninth, and Lee Erickson, Lincoln-Way freshman, was tenth.

Bill Been, Lincoln-Way was 12th and two other members of the team. Tom Booble and Bill Simpson finished 24th and 41st respectively. Placing five men in the first 12 is quite a feat.

The Lincoln-Way team is coached by Joe Rodriguez. He will take a 10-man squad to Champaign. Alternates are, Bob Carhardt, Al Carlson and Craig Otto.

Lincoln - Way harriers won a dual meet at Tinley Park this year with a perfect 12-0 score.

TURKEY SHOOT - The Fathers Club of Sacred Heart High School, Mokena, is having a turkey shoot for the membership only on Tuesday, Nov. 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the school gym, St. Francis Woods, 193rd & LaGrange Rd. One of every two members present will win a Thanksgiving turkey. Refreshments and cards will follow.

Lipman Distributes Tax Money In Area

More than $7-million in real estate and personal tax collections are being distributed to various taxing bodies this week, it was reported by W.S. Schuetz, assistant treasurer, to Will County Treasurer Clarence Lipman (R).

This is the second distribution this year and the third will be made shortly after the first of the year and will be made up of taxes collected since Oct. 7 and the money taken in at tax sale in December.

County Treasurer Lipman said he was making the distribution now to eliminate the necessity of selling tax anticipation warrants by some taxing bodies. Tax warrant cost the taxpayers money, it was pointed out.

The largest single check in the current distribution is for $1,083,302.37 which went to the Joliet Township High School District No. 204.

Lincoln-Way High School District No. 210 received a check for $237,374.54.

Underlying grade districts received checks in the following amounts:

Dist. 122, New Lenox, $98,799.77.

Dist. 159, Mokena, $39,675.92.

Dist. 157-C, Frankfort, $33,288.44.

Dist. 161, Arbury Hills, $41,173.81.

Dist. 56-C, Lincoln Estates, $9,932.79.

The Village of Mokena received $4,652.56 for general purposes, and $1,038.55 for its own Road and Bridge Fund. The Mokena District Library received $2,242.02. A check for $3,312.36 was made out to the Mokena Park District. The Mokena Fire District received $2,342.23.

The Village of Frankfort received $7,374.51, for general purposes. The Frankfort Fire District received $3,111.13.

The Village of New Lenox received $7,703.86 for general purposes and $1,229.14 for its own Road and Bridge Fund. The New Lenox Fire Protection District received $6,695.16.

Frankfort Township received $5,586.56 for general purposes; $17,290.18 for its Road and Bridge Fund and $1,345.92 for poor relief.

New Lenox Township received $2,075.35 for general purposes; $12,829.84 for Road and Bridge.

The Junior College District No. 525, of which this area is a part, received a check for $121,664.42.

The County's share of the distribution was $542,002.96.

The exact amount distributed totaled $7,035,079.11.

Demonstrate New Method Of Voting

A demonstration of the Votomatic voting machine, to be used in the election in Will County Nov. 5, will be given at a meeting in Willowcrest School at 8 o'clock tomorrow night (Nov. 1), it was announced by Mrs. F. Berle Needham, who will be in charge.

The public is invited. Mrs. Needham said that candidates would also be there to answer any questions voters may have. Slides also will be shown.

Use of the Votomatics will greatly reduce the work of the election judges in compiling the precinct results. After the polls are closed the cards which have been punched in the Votomatics will be fed thru a computer and the answers will be forthcoming in seconds. The only paper ballots the judges will have to count will be the Blue Ballot, dealing with the Con-Con question, and a ballot for the retention of Michael Orenic as judge of the circuit court of the 12th judicial district.

Since both of these ballots are simple "yes and no" the judges should have little difficulty in tallying them within a short time, it was said.

Vote 'Yes' On Con Con

Voters will decide Tuesday on the Blue Ballot whether to authorize a Constitutional Convention (Con Con for short). You will not be voting on a new constitution, new taxes, or on any amendments to the present constitution. Your vote will decide only whether such a convention should be convened.

ON 2nd THOT

By Glenn Logan

According to an old song, involving one Billy-boy, the lad is being subjected to a cross-examination dealing with the culinary skills of his bride-to-be. Your correspondent does not recall the identity of the examiner but it is only fair to assume that it was the young man's mother, because after all who would call a grown man Billy-boy -- and get away with it except a mother.

Anyway, at one point in the questioning, the examiner is quoted as singing: "Can she bake a cherry pie, Billy-boy, Billy-boy, can she bake a cherry pie, Charming Billy?"

Such a question might catch some chaps napping. They might have been expecting a query as to whether the girl could make her own dresses, whip up a batch of biscuits, turn out a mass of turnip greens, a pot roast, or fry chicken, and so flounder about a bit in getting out an answer.

But not Billy-boy. Billy-boy's answer came out swift and certain.

"She can bake a cherry pie, as quick as a cat can wink its eye," says Billy, and that's that.

Of course, that was long ago. Life was simpler. There was no Big Brother in Washington and bureaucrat was spelled in lower case. Even the "b" was a small letter.

Had Billy-boy been asked the same question today he probably would not have been so fast with his answer. He might have gotten away with that "she can bake a cherry pie as quick as a cat can wink its eye" with his mother but today his interrogator probably would be someone from the Federal Food and Drug Administration, if not a federal district attorney.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration has a lot of things to do, its spokesmen tell Congress from time to time in the bureau's quest for more, and larger appropriations, but it has found time, according to the word from Washington, to defining a cherry pie and telling how it must be made.

And Charming Billy, if he were honest, would have to admit that even his gifted girl friend would be slowed down in her pie making if required to follow the ukase laid down by the FDA.

"A cherry pie", the FDA states, "is a food prepared by incorporating in a filling contained in a pastry shell, mature, whole, pitted, stemmed, red, sour (tart) cherries (fresh, frozen or canned) that have not been treated with a chemical preservative."

It does not rule out home-grown cherries so presumably if one has a cherry tree or trees in his or her own yard, said cherries could be used if the owner has not been treating them with some noxious chemical or chemicals, and they are mature, whole, pitted, stemmed, red and tart.

Getting the cherries should not be too difficult, nor time consuming, but the preparation of the filling, plus the making the pie crust, are just preliminaries.

Putting the stuff together is a bureaucratic process that would have put Billy-boy's bride-to-be completely out of the running in any speed competition with eye winking cats.

A cherry pie, rules the FDA, shall contain and we quote from the Industrial Review's report from the FDA files -- "shall contain not less than 2.7 cherries per ounce of net weight."

Got that? All right, lets get on with it. Time marches backward.

"Remove the filling and cherries from the pie," the rules read, "and distribute evenly over the surface of a 12-inch-diameter U.S. No. 8 sieve. . . stacked on a U.S. No. 20 sieve. Wash the cherries and cherry fragments free from adhering material with a gentle water spray.

"Drain the cherry contents of the No. 8 sieve for two minutes in an inclined position (5 - to - 30 - degree slope). Do not discard contents of No. 20 sieve. Transfer the whole cherries to a tared pan (Ed. Note: A tared pan is a container, the weight of which is known and can therefore be deducted when the whole is weighed) and determine the weight of all whole cherries."

Nauseating, isn't it? And it gets worse and even if C.B.'s fiancée is successful in building a cherry pie per the official instructions from Big Brother's FDA, it is going to take her a long time and Billy-boy will have to change that line about the cat winking. Anyway, the Department of Public Health probably has some sort of prohibition about the presence of cats while food is being prepared.

The cherry pie as planned by the FDA sounds revolting and it is doubtful that Billy-boy would or could have any appetite for it when it was finished.

He'd be better off to have a cup of instant coffee and a coconut, unless the FDA has issued instructions as to how a coconut shall be opened.

A constitutional convention brings together elected delegates who meet for the single purpose of reviewing the Illinois Constitution and making recommendations to the people.

(Delegates would be elected at primary and general elections set by the General Assembly following approval by the voters of the call to convention.)

The procedure is not unlike taking your car to the garage to have it checked. The mechanics most likely will find some things wrong with it. You undoubtedly will have them repaired, and your car will run much better.

So it is with the affairs of state government in Illinois. Our archaic constitution was written in 1848 and revised somewhat in 1870. Its 15,000 words prevent the legislature from dealing effectively with the pressing problems of the modern era.

It prohibits granting of special or local laws in 21 enumerated cases. It places bond and debt restrictions for local and state government. Its detailed provisions structure township and county government and their elected officials.

The vast bulk and ordinary statute law in the present document often compel your elected officials to find ways and means of circumventing the provisions of the constitution in order to carry out business of the day. This often solves an immediate problem but creates many undesirable procedures of government.

Simply put, the instrument is not compatible to the complexities of our day. A modern document is the most urgent need confronting our state.

As stated above, your vote on the Blue Ballot decides only whether to convene a constitutional convention. When the convention completes its work, voters will decide in a special election whether to adopt or reject its recommendations.

Thus, your vote on the Blue Ballot does not commit you to a change in your state government. It does give you the opportunity to learn from experts what they ultimately determine would be the most efficient and appropriate constitution.

Many individuals, not understanding the proposition and fearing they are setting in motion conditions adverse to themselves, do not vote on constitutional matters. That is the same as voting "no."

We urge all citizens to vote on the convention call. We further recommend that you cast a "yes" ballot. The alternative is continued governmental chaos.

SLIGHTLY IRREVERENT

Cooking for Fun and Profit

by dave steele

Following last week's trip to the supermarket I took all my purchases home, planning all the while the fantastic meal I was going to quickly and efficiently fix. At least I was right about one thing; it was fantastic.

Amazing as it seems I didn't have a bit of trouble getting things open (unless you count losing a fingernail in the can opener and that could happen to anybody). From that point however, everything went down hill.

The first instruction on my box of frozen "meal in a minute" threw me for a loop. It said, "Pre heat oven at 475." After holding my lighter in the oven for one hour and 17 minutes I assumed I obviously didn't have the hang of "pre-heating." My hand was medium rare by that time but the oven was still as cold as a first date.

Then I noticed those funny looking little knobs and with typical male ingenuity figured out they had something to do with "pre-heating." Four seconds later my assumption proved correct and my hand was now medium. But, at least the oven was "pre-heating." Unfortunately the box said nothing about how long it took to "pre-heat" an oven and being ravenous at the time I decided 45 seconds was plenty.

Throwing my frozen goodies on the fire, I retrieved the instructions from the trash to find out what to do next. "Heat for 30 or 35 minutes," seemed simple enough so I departed the kitchen and sat down to watch "Learn to Cook" on television (as if I needed it, I scoffed).

Four gallons of water and three firemen later (it was an hour show and I got interested), I put the second frozen dinner in the oven. Catching on quickly I watched this little devil's progress and pulled it out of the oven after five minutes. (Lesson I: A frozen pea will not melt in your mouth during October).

From that little experience I did learn one thing: never trust a recipe. Moving along in that vein I concocted my own concoction (even though that sounds dirty I hate to use the word cooking), and at that time I'm making the secret available to all my readers. If you desire re-prints to send to your mother-in-law, don't bother. Just send a bottle of arsenic; it'll be quicker and more humane.

Steele's Scrumptious Sluck

Ingredients: Four shakes of salt (unless you mistake the sugar for the salt then use less salt . . . I mean sugar); 3 slices bacon (select from the inside of the package, the outside is spoiled); 4 eggs (with or without shells depending on ability to break eggs); 1 handful cheese (unless cheese is rotten then use 1/2 handful); lots and lots of baloney; 4 or 5 scoops grease; 1 shirt button (darn thing fell off; I can't sew either); a dash here and a dash there for anything else rotting under tinfoil in the refrigerator.

Mix everything thoroughly in "pre-heated" (sound like a pro don't I?) skillet; you can tell if it is "pre-heated"; the handle will burn your fingers giving you an owie; stir gently everytime there's a commercial on tv; try to remove from pan melted spatula left during last commercial (Lesson II: Sluck a la Spatula melte' is chewy); wait until baloney is golden brown (if baloney was golden brown to start with it was spoiled, so wait until it gets browner; pick up skillet (sure hope you used pot holders or you've got another owie); toss skillet contents in trash; eat out like you should have in the first place.

Then, either continue to eat out or get married. Pass the menu please.

Use Mail Again For CROP Contributions

William Polley of Plainfield, Campaign Director for the Will County CROP Hunger Appeal, announced today that the annual CROP Canvass in Will County, will be conducted by mail again this year. Letters requesting contributions will be mailed out to rural landowners and operators for return during the week of November 24 thru 30. Donations may be sent to the ASCS Office, 1256 West Jefferson Street in Joliet.

Promotional Sunday will be observed on Nov. 24 in rural churches throught the county. The Rev. Dean Klontz of Wilmington, is serving as promotion director. Charles Deutsch of Elwood is board chairman.

CROP provides a variety of resources for church-related relief programs overseas -- shipping high protein foods not available thru government donation, commodities for food-for-work projects, tools and farm equipment, seed, fertilizer, and funds for establishing family planning clinics, cooperatives, well-drilling equipment, and for other attacks upon root causes of hunger.

Projects carried out by CROP in Africa were recently shown to members of the Will County CROP Board, by Lowell H. Brown, Crop World Service Field Director. Brown visited several countries in Africa this past summer. His firsthand information provided an insight on assistance being given in the effort to stop hunger.

What Happens If House Picks President?

Congress Decides If No Majority

The showing of George Wallace in the public opinion polls has generated considerable discussion about the outcome of this year's Presidential balloting -- specifically the possibility that no candidate would receive an electoral majority. The selection of the next President could be made in the House of Representatives. What are the procedural matters involved if this happens? What about a Vice President? Here's how Congress would cope with the situation.

IF NO PRESIDENTIAL nominee gets an absolute majority of the 538 votes cast by the Electoral College, the Constitution provides that the House shall choose the next President from the two or three contenders with the most electoral votes. The selection would be made by the newly-elected Congress which convenes in January.

When the House chooses a President -- and only then -- Congressmen vote by State delegations and not as individuals representing the people of their districts. Each State casts one vote, whether it has only one or 41 Members in the House. An absolute majority of 26 State votes is required to pick a President.

If a State's delegation in the House is evenly divided -- as are Illinois, Oregon and Montana in the current Congress -- it has no vote and voters of those States are effectively disenfranchised. In this Congress, Democrats are a majority in 29 State delegations and Republicans are a majority in 18.

In 24 States, however, a switch of one or two seats from Democrat to Republican would significantly change its preference for the next President.

A Presidential election can be thrown into the House of Representatives if the Electoral College vote is exactly tied between two persons, 269 to 269, or if third party or additional contenders win enough electoral votes to prevent any candidate from getting 270. (There is no provision for a second ballot by the electors.)

It has happened both ways in U.S. history -- but not for 144 years.

DESPITE SEVERAL amendments, the ground rules, unfortunately, are not fully fixed by the Constitution. Some elements depend on ordinary statute law, which can be changed by this or any Congress. Furthermore, the ground rules by which the House selects a President differ from those by which the Senate selects a Vice President, or Acting President, in case of deadlock.

Only twice has the House picked a President. It could do so again in 1969.

In 1801, Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr were tied in the Electoral College. The House chose Jefferson after Alexander Hamilton, his longtime political rival, threw his support to the Virginian and against his fellow New Yorker. Burr later killed Hamilton in a duel.

By 1825, the Constitution had been amended to preclude another such impasse, requiring electors to vote separately for President and Vice President, who presumably would be of the same party. Eventually, after much wheeling and dealing, the House elected John Quincy Adams as our fifth President over Andrew Jackson, despite Jackson's popular and electoral plurality.

AT PRESENT, Election Day is the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November (this year Nov. 5). The duly chosen electors meet in their respective States and the District of Columbia and cast their votes on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December (Dec. 16 this year), and the Congress meets to canvass and certify the electoral vote at 1 p.m. on the January 6th following each meeting of the electors.

This, of course, would be the new 91st Congress, with all members of the House sworn in on January 3 under the Constitution. But this January 6 date can be changed by Congress at any time.

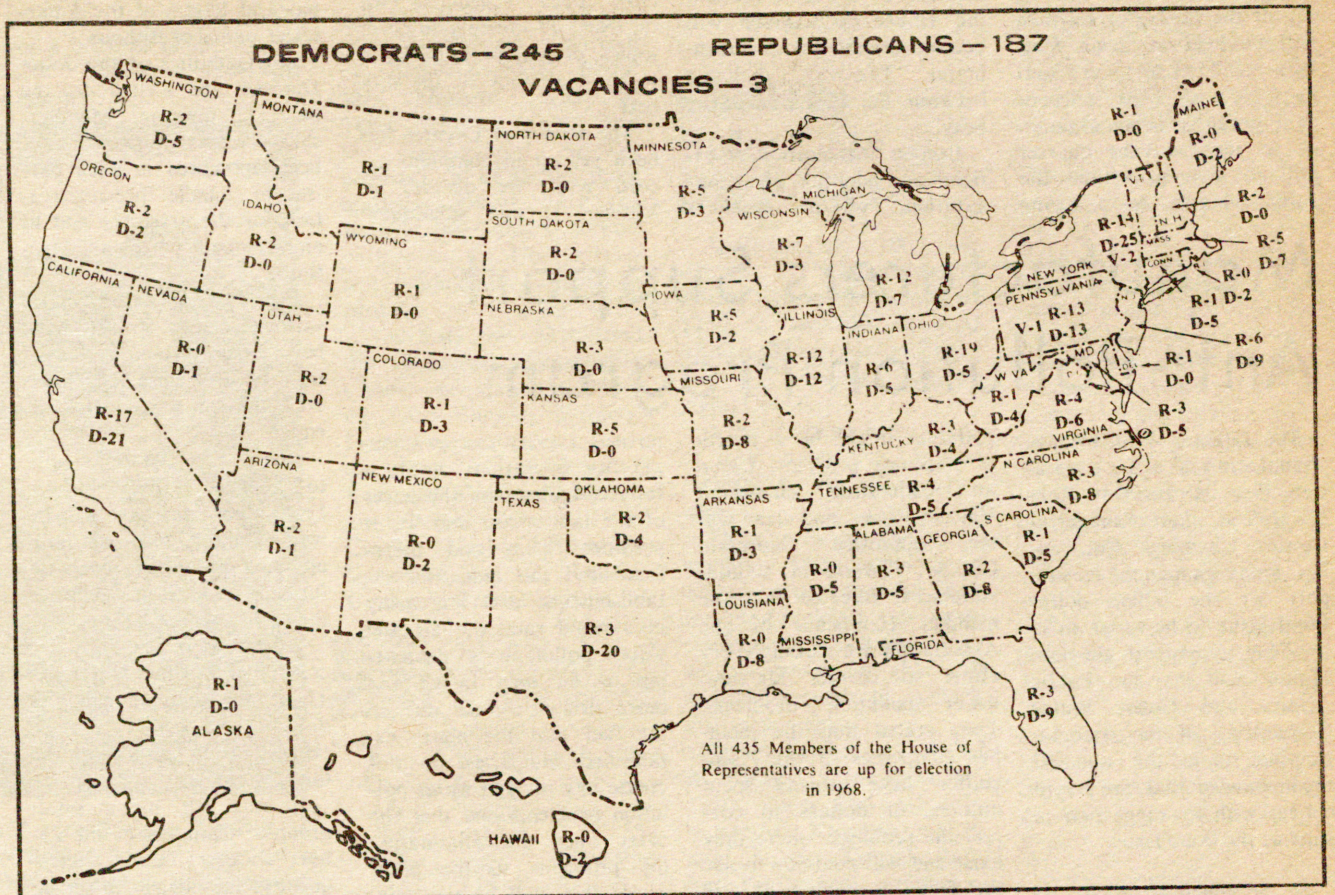

The President in office always has power to summon Congress into special session. It is not considered likely that any President or any Congress would flout the clear mandate of the American people. But what if the mandate is unclear?

Assuming there are no Congressional absentees, no vacancies due to death or resignation, and that all members would vote in their State delegations for the nominee of their national party, the present House of Representatives would choose Hubert Humphrey by a margin of 29 to 18 (see map).

IT IS POSSIBLE, depending upon where the gains and losses occur on November 5, that Republicans could win control of the whole House of Representatives and still leave the Democrats with a majority in 26 State delegations -- enough to pick a President. It is less likely, but still possible, that Republicans could win majorities within 26 or more State delegations in the next House and still fall slightly short of the 218 seats required for control in the 91st Congress.

More probable than either is that a third party candidate, after winning the popular and electoral votes of some States, would also get majority support from those State delegations in the House despite their normal Democratic-Republican division. This, together with tied delegations, could prevent anyone from getting the 26 State votes required to be named President and deadlock the House as well as the Electoral College.

The Constitution anticipates this, though it hasn't yet happened. If the House is unable to pick a President by inauguration time -- noon of January 20, 1969 -- the Vice President-elect becomes Acting President. Conceivably, this could continue for two years until the next Congress is elected and seated.

Party makeup of present House of Representatives

But if no Presidential contenders gets an electoral majority, in all probability no Vice Presidential candidate will either. In this event, the Constitution says the Senate shall pick the next Vice President.

THE RULES are different. Senators vote as individuals, as they always do. They choose from the top two electoral winners -- not the top three. An absolute majority (51) is required, and Senate vacancies can be instantly filled by Governors' appointments. There can be no deadlock in the Senate's selection of a Vice President, since it is a continuing body in which the incumbent Vice President is Constitutionally empowered to break any tie.

Thus, one may speculate that Vice President Humphrey, himself denied the Presidency by a House deadlock, might cast the Senate vote that makes Senator Muskie the Acting President of the United States.

To be absolutely sure of a change in Washington next year, enough Republican Congressmen must be elected to make up majorities within at least 26 State delegations -- eight more than Republicans control now.

Ideally a shift of nine seats could accomplish this, but practically it will take more to make certain. Congressional contests in 24 States are the battleground in this Presidential backstop operation.

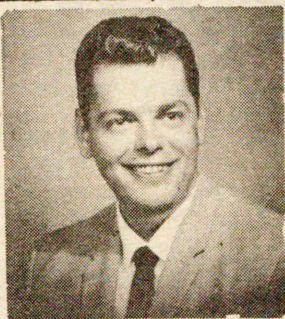

One Republican replacing an incumbent Democrat in the House would switch the Presidential preference of seven States: the presently tied delegations from Illinois (12-12), Oregon (2-2) and Montana (1-1) plus Pennsylvania (R13-D13 with one vacancy), Kentucky (R3-D4), Nevada (D1) and Tennessee (R4-D5). All but two of these States have Republican Governors; together they have seven Republican Senators.

IN ANOTHER 11 States, a switch of one seat would deny the House vote to the Democrats and two more Republican Congressmen would win control of those delegations. They are: Alabama (R3-D5), Arkansas (R1-D3), Colorado (R1-D3), Hawaii (D2), Maine (D2), Maryland (R3-D5), Massachusetts (R5-D7), New Mexico (D2), Oklahoma (R2-D4), Rhode Island (D2) and Virginia (R4-D6).

A 1968 gain of two Republican seats would also win the House delegations of New Jersey (R6-D9), Washington State (R2-D5) and West Virginia (R1-D4) and would tie up California (R17-D21), Connecticut (R1-D5) and South Carolina (R1-D5) if the next President is chosen by the House of Representatives.

Joliet Diocese Laity Will Hold Assembly

The first General Assembly of the House of Laymen will be held at Lewis College in Lockport on Sunday, Nov. 17. The independent group is being organized to represent the quarter million laymen within the Joliet Diocese. As a strong medium of Catholic Action, the House of Laymen will become a vital link in meaningful "Two-way" dialogue between the bishop and the laity.

Besides the election of officers and adoption of a Constitution, several speakers have been scheduled for the Nov. 17 meeting to cover topics of timely importance to all Catholics of the diocese.

The House of Laymen has been set up in complete accord with the decrees of Vatican II and subsequent pastoral letters of the American Council of Bishops.

All Catholics of the Joliet Diocese are invited to the Nov. 17 meeting. Membership representatives have been appointed in each parish to handle pre-registration for the assembly and to answer any pertinent questions.

For two or three years, various laymen groups have been set up thruout the country. It was observed, however, that most seemed inadequate.

Some were set up simply to "oppose" the bishop. From their inception a solid wall of antagonism was built up that prevented meaningful communication between the laity and their bishop.

Others were set up and controlled by the hierarchy. Their only function being to disseminate information from the bishop to the laity.

It was felt by a small group of Catholics of the Joliet Diocese, that Consequently, they began to set up criteria for what they believed to be the "model" laymen's organization. One of the criteria was that the organization be representative of as broad a base of laity as possible. Consequently, they contacted others who contacted still more.

Soon after there were a series of meetings held in each area of the diocese. Total attendance at these regional meetings soared to several hundred. At these meetings the plans and criteria of the small nucleus were presented and discussed.

The result was the election of 40 or 50 people to form a steering committee to work out the details of making the House of Laymen a reality. The steering committee held its first meeting in August, and after organizing itself into a few sub-committees has already worked out a proposed constitution, a slate of officers and directors, ways to increase membership and a general assembly at which all of this can be presented to the laity of the Joliet Diocese.

The general assembly will be held on Sunday, Nov. 17 at Lewis College in Lockport. The agenda calls for a keynote address by Joel Wells, editor of "Critic Magazine" which will point out the necessity of forming the House of Laymen. Immediately following, a panel of experts will discuss the plans as set up by the steering committee. The constitution will then be presented for adoption and will be followed by the election of officers and directors. After a buffet supper, the newly elected officers and directors will be presented to the assembly and then there will be a final address by Mr. and Mrs. Bonsignore.

The "guts" of the House of Laymen will be various Commissions assigned to different areas of interest and concern to Catholics of the Joliet Diocese. Before publishing their findings and recommendations, however, the Commissions will present them to the directors that are elected from each area (based on population) and the six at-large directors.

This safeguard and others is designed to prevent either of the two extremes making the House of Laymen ineffective without stifling the creativity of the laity, it was explained.

Manufacturers Support Anti-Pollution Program

The Greater Will County Manufacturers' Association, thru its president, Robert Holton, plant manager of Cowles Chemical Co., Joliet, today announced its support for the billion dollar Bond Issue to be voted on in the Nov. 5 general election. Holton said that the Public Affairs and Clean Water Committees of the Association had studied the issue and recommended that the board concur with its suggestion to support the Bond Issue.

In commenting upon its reasoning, Holton stated that because many companies and communities cannot afford the water pollution control and water supply costs, proper administration and allocation of funds for these purposes should relieve the problems much sooner than could otherwise be anticipated.

In conjunction with this announcement, the Clean Air and Clean Water Committees of the Association released a joint statement regarding their position as related to the communities in Will and Grundy counties where industrial air and/or water pollution might be a health or nuisance problem. Clean air committee chairman, Vincent Russo, and clean water committee chairman, George Travers, in a joint statement, revealed that the member companies of the Association are making every effort to correct air and water pollution problems. They stated that the member companies of the Association have already spent millions of dollars to correct the problems where they exist and will continue to use the many technological and financial aids available until the problems are eliminated.

Messrs. Russo and Travers further stated that, altho industrial air and water pollution problems are minor when compared with automotive air pollution and community sewage and water pollution, the Manufacturers' Association and its individual member companies are fully cooperating with all the rules, regulations, laws and ordinances that have been written on local, state and federal levels.

They pointed out that in the recent dramatic industrial development of the area, no new facility can even begin its operations until it fully complies with the letter of the law on air and water pollution. They said, therefore, that the industrial establishments are increasing at a rapid rate, the air and water pollution is decreasing at an even faster and more dramatic rate due to the fact that the newly established industries do not create any air and water pollution problems and that the older ones are eliminating the problems to the point where they will be non-existent in a very few years.

In concluding, they said that major contributors to air and water pollution in this Will-Grundy County area are, besides automobiles, buses and trucks, the sanitary districts of other communities. They said that the Greater Will County Manufacturers' Association, along with its committees and clubs, will continue to be a very good neighbor in the Will-Grundy County area and should be considered a positive economic, social and moral factor in the communities of this area.

hints for homeowners

By: Richard Delano
Associate Extension Adviser
Horticulture, Cook County

Every home should be attractive as much of the year as possible. This is why two season plants are so popular. They form interesting plantings in either sun or snow.

Dwarf fruit trees, however, surpass the two season approach to usefulness. They provide flowers during spring, shade in summer, fall fruit color in autumn and food for eating throughout winter.

However, this food for winter is not automatic. It must be carefully cultivated. The fine finished fruit that is available on the tables of today is one of the miracles of modern agriculture. Apples and other fruit during colonial days did not receive the special care of today's orchards. As a result it was often wormy, spotted and misshapen. As a result, much of the fruit went into cider production.

For perfect finished fruit, commercial growers spray at least 13 times a season. While homeowners can seldom spray this often, it does indicate the need for this aspect of care. If, on the other hand, home fruit trees are not sprayed, disease and insects may greatly reduce the size and quality of the yield although trees are seldom completely barren.

Trees may be completely barren for a number of causes. Winter kill of the buds is one of the big causes of fruit failure. In fact, flower buds of peaches and sweet cherry are so sensitive that their planting is not recommended in this area if fruit is wanted. They will, of course, give an attractive bloom and survive to the point of giving useful shade.

Some gardeners are too impatient for fruit. From the time trees are set out, it takes four to seven years to produce apples. Sour cherries take four to five years, pears and plums four to six years to start bearing.

Sometimes cross pollination is necessary for fruit production. For example, it is necessary to plant two or more varieties of plums or pears. However, the Seckel and Bartlett varieties of pears will not pollinate each other.

Apples have their pollinating requirements, too. Although Golden Delicious will pollinate itself, it's a good idea with other varieties to use two or more varieties. Poor pollen-producing apples are Winesap, Stayman, Baldwin and Gravenstein. They need some other varieties to produce a crop.

Sometimes five varieties of apples are grafted to one dwarf tree. The cross pollination is supposed to make a super crop. In actual practice it doesn't work this well; usually one or two varieties dominate and the weaker branch-producing varieties soon die out.

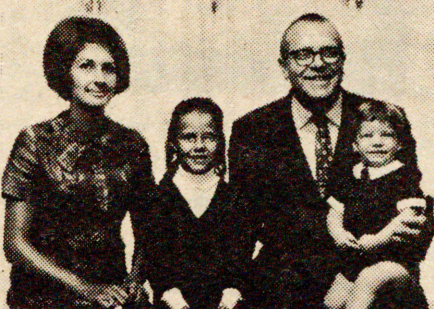

A last factor in fruit production is alternate year production. Certain varieties tend to have peak years regardless of what is done.

All this points out that fruit production is a science that takes some knowledge and effort. However, if you enjoy spring bloom, the graceful growth of a medium sized tree and the bonus of occasional apple, plum or pear, plant the fruit trees. Better yet, plant your fruit trees in trios of different varieties.

Car Hits Pole; Cuts Off Power

Approximately 100 customers of Commonwealth Edison Co. in the vicinity of 175th St. and 94th Av. were without power for one hour and 37 minutes Tuesday night, Oct. 22.

A car knocked down a pole at their intersection, it was reported to the utility company.

There was no report of anything that would have caused interruption of service at Frankfort but some resident there said they were without power for about 10 minutes around 11 o'clock that same night.

Driver of the car, Gerald R. Kirby, 19, of 6871 W. 175th, Tinley Park, was taken to Christ Community Hospital in the Orland Park Fire Department ambulance, as were his three passengers. They were examined, treated and released.

The New Lenox Association of Commerce has changed its schedule of meetings to include an evening session to accommodate those whose affairs prevent them from attending the noon sessions.

The group will hold a luncheon meeting once a month -- it will be on the second Tuesday at 12 noon in Bruns restaurant. The evening will be at 7 o'clock on the fourth Tuesday of each month. It too will be held at Bruns.

At its meeting last week the Association completed plans for the Halloween parade that was held last evening and discussed the approaching Holidays season.

The Association of Commerce will not conduct a lighting contest this year, as it has for the past several years nor will it install any Christmas decorations along the streets. At a recent village board meeting it was reported that the utility company would not permit the use of its poles in the decorating scheme. Village officials suggested that a large tree be erected on village property and properly decorated and lighted.

The Association of Commerce has concurred in this proposal and its members will decorate the tree.

County League Observes State Sesquicentennial

By Virginia Sass

The fall biannual meeting of the Will County Club League was held at the Channahon Methodist Church on Oct. 22 with the Channahon Community Club as hosts. There were 68 members and guests present. The president, Mrs. Fred Martin of the Jackson Community Club, called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock. A welcome was extended to the group by Mrs. A.T. Alexander of the Channahon Club. The response was given by Mrs. Charles Elliott of the Marley Woman's Club.

The program during the morning session was in observance of the Illinois Sesquicentennial. Appropriate music featured the singing of "Illinois" led by Mrs. Alfred Emiley of New Lenox with Mrs. Ada Orbeson of Plainfield at the organ. Mrs. Orbeson also spoke on the history of the I&M Canal. She related interesting accounts of her childhood by the canal as it cut thru her father's farm in Channahon Township.

Each club participated with a talk and display of historical items. Mrs. Emiley, who is a member of the Channahon Club, displayed a flint pistol used during the War of 1812, a candle lantern from the ship cabin occupied by her parents when they came to America from England, a candle-holder complete with snuffer and trimmer and a silver canister set.

Mrs. Lavern Johnson of the Florence Community Club, conducted a style show with Mrs. Stella Morey, aged 94 and Mrs. Euna Jackson, aged 80, as the models. Mrs. Morey, who is an active member of the Florence Club, wore a hand-made, two piece gown, dated 1890. Mrs. Jackson, a charter member of the Florence Club, modeled the gown she wore at her wedding on Dec. 15, 1915. Mrs. Johnson also showed two 130-year old silver heirlooms from Scotland.

Mrs. Vincent Smiley, represented the Jackson Community Club as she showed a hand-carded, woven and embroidered wool blanket, dated 1831, and another wool blanket, hand-made at the turn of the century.

The Marley Club was represented by Mrs. Harry Scheller who displayed a 100-year old coffee-grinder, a 100-year old cook book and a collection of Civil War badges and mementos. A hooked rug, hand-made and designed like the Illinois Sesquicentennial seal, was featured by the Wesley Community Club and shown by Mrs. Jessie Kelly.

Honors were extended to Mrs. Nettie Blaine of the Channahon Club during the morning program, as the day marked her 90th birthday anniversary.

At noon, luncheon was served by the ladies of the Channahon Church. Following this, a bakery and white elephant sale was conducted by Mrs. John Hasibar and Mrs. Elliott.

The program in the afternoon was presented by Mrs. Nadine Foster of Joliet. She gave a talk, illustrated with colored slides and souvenirs, on her visit with her family to Tokyo, Japan in 1966.

Booster Banquet To Feature Spaghetti

A Spaghetti Festival is being cooked up as the bill of fare for the Fall Athletic banquet, scheduled for the evening of Nov. 6.

In the spotlight will be the burly letter winners from the football squads and the long striding members of the cross country team.

Bill Green of Orland Park makes his first appearance as banquet chairman for this event. Green's facility in handling foods is widely acclaimed but, more importantly, he will be aided by the wizardry of Verdi La-Rosa, the ubiquitous, if ephemeral and mysterious chef, so famous for concocting the spaghetti sauces featured on the menu.

Rudy Smeja, vice-president of the Eagle Boosters, has predicted a sell out gathering for this dinner. He emphasized that the wonderful football season, combined with the innovations in the food to be served, has assured a capacity crowd.

Leon Lucas, president of the Boosters, explained in an interview that participation on "letter day" was one of the best ways for parents to relate with their teen age sons. He urged all parents with boys on the squads to turn on and get their tickets early for this one.

The Eagle Boosters Club sponsoring this banquet is one of two authorized fund raising organizations at Carl Sandburg High School. (Music Parents is the other). This club has donated much athletic equipment, and has helped athletics in countless ways at the school. Last year the club presented a multiple weight lifter for the gym, and this year, to date, has helped with a much needed under water camera for the swimming team.

Tickets for this event may be obtained by calling Bill

Green at 349-0998, and from the members of the football and cross country teams, and at the Athletic Office. It is possible that a few tickets will be available at the door.

L-W Athletes To Sell Sox Thru Area

If the idea of contributing to another charity makes you a little skeptical, the Lincoln-Way Gymnastics and Wrestling Clubs have come up with an idea to not only lessen the possible pain but also give you something in return.

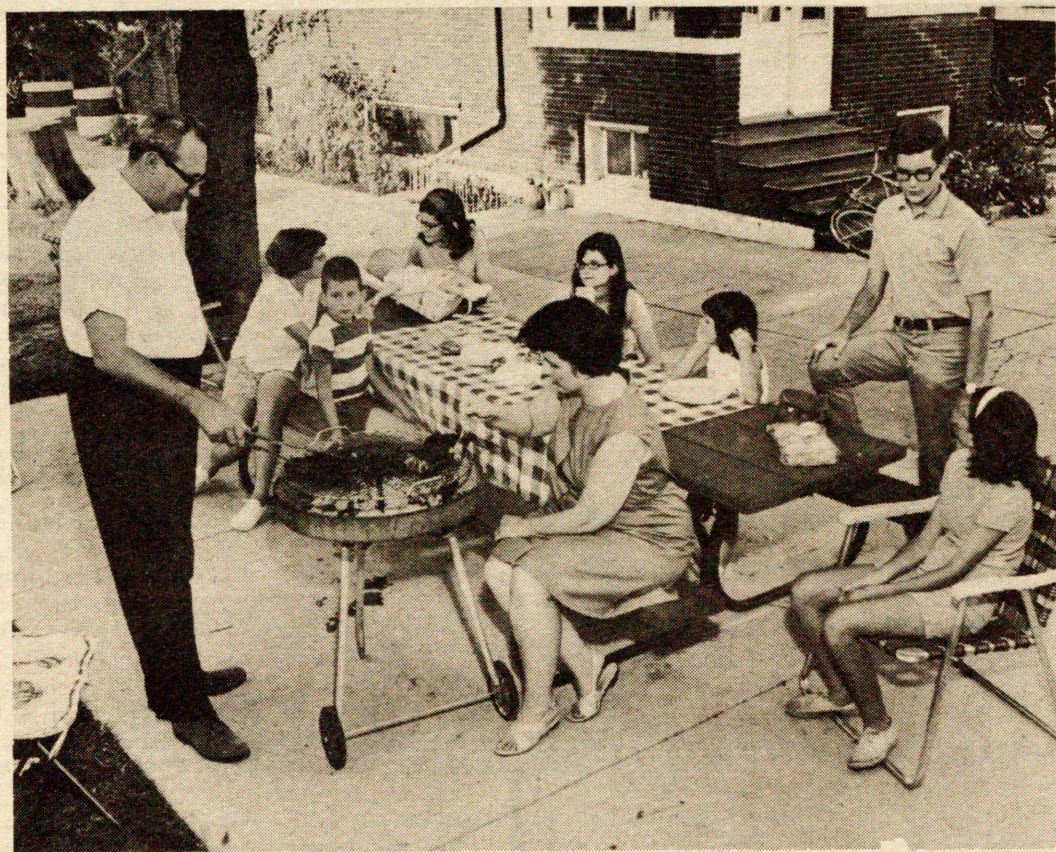

From Nov. 4 to Nov. 22, according to Athletic Director Ronald Stopka. The Clubs will be raising funds by selling fine quality men's and women's socks at one third off retail price, and the price you pay includes your contribution to charity, he says.

The club made arrangements thru a firm to sell its top line of half hose at the discount price. The lines carried will include men's orlon-nylon and over the calf, and athletic crew sock, and girls knee socks and TV booties.

One can place an order by phone, thru Ronald Stopka at Lincoln-Way or at home between 6 and 9 p.m. The school phone is 485-2511 extension 45, and home phone, 469-5697.

Open Letter from the HIRSCHS'

Dear friends,

We believe we are safe in saying that the public is less informed on funeral merchandise than on any other type of business. This is only natural, as the average family's need for such information is not frequent, and it is a matter most desire to avoid.

We do believe, however, that it is to everyone's advantage to know more about modern funeral service. We welcome your visit to inspect our facilities and to ask questions.

It Takes a Lot Of Work To Be A Cheerleader

EIGHTH GRADE cheerleaders at Frankfort, now increased to six, are (l to r): Bobbie Dean, Gayle Kross, Carol Blaylock, Marla Brown, Donna Tsokatos and Debbie Pomykala.

Last week was a busy and exciting one for seventh and eighth grade girls in Frankfort School.

It was Cheerleading Try-out Week!

The eighth grade squad, which had been composed of four cheerleaders, was expanded to six. This meant two places to fill and competition was high.

And on top of this seventh graders were to be chosen from 13 candidates.

In all there were 21 girls in the tryouts. Mrs. Stanley Bochtler, the cheerleader coach, explained that each girl was required to create and demonstrate her own cheer. They also were required to master four of the school's cheers. They also had to show their agility thru jumps, splits and cartwheels. They also were made aware of the importance of audience contact. Then there is the voice -- the volume, tone and diction.

When the big day came the 21 girls, dressed in gym suits, lined up before an assembly made up of fifth thru eighth graders. Then, one by one, alphabetically, the tryouts began.

Each girl demonstrated the cheer she had created and then stepped back into line. When approximately six girls had finished they came out again to demonstrate their ability to work as a squad.

At the end ballots were passed out and later the results were announced when all the candidates met in the school library.

Gayle Kross and Donna Tsokatos joined the eighth grade squad of Carol Blaylock, Marla Brown, Bobbie Dean and Debbie Pomykala.

The seventh grade squad, looking forward to two years of work together, is comprised of, Linda Bruske, Carol Dean, Cheryl Hraha, Robin Kelly, Georgeann Michelson and Sandra Mills.

Cow Killed When Hit By Automobile

Mrs. Pat Guzik, a Frankfort real estate dealer, escaped serious injury Sunday night when a beef feeder reportedly scrambled across a ditch and into the path of her car.

The animal, which belonged to Frank Fleck, Center Rd., south of the village, was killed. Damage to the car, according to the Frankfort police report, was about $1,000.

The accident occurred about 8 o'clock. Police Chief Ted Massey said that several cattle got out of the pasture thru a break in the fence.

It was a black night, the report noted, and the animal was a Black Angus, and Center Rd. has a blacktop surface.

PIONEER CEMETERY on Wolf Rd., Mokena, is being kept neat and tidy by the Mokena Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Formerly the task was done by the Amvets. Time is taking a toll of the ancient stones and some of the names they bear are indcipherable. In fact there are many graves where the stones have disappeared and it is difficult to say who may be buried there. Occasionally transients passing by stop to study the old stones. That low stone in the center marks the resting place of Charles Denny, a soldier in the American Revolution, and one of the pioneers of Mokena. (Semmler Newspapers photo)

Plans For More Out-patient Care

The annual report of Sunny Hill Sanatorium has been released by the sanatorium board of trustees.

The report shows a total of 75 patients being treated for tuberculosis during the fiscal year which commenced Sept. 1, 1967, and closed Aug. 31, 1968. However, there were 6,087 X-rays taken of patients in the clinic. Eighty-nine ex-patients and contacts of patients received medications through the clinic.

Three patients died in the institution, but only one died from far advanced pulmonary tuberculosis. Dr. Robert Jensik, chief chest surgeon, performed eleven chest operations, while Dr. Paul Holinger, bronchoscopist, performed five bronchoscopies.

In the forward to the annual report, the trustees point out the steadily declining rate of admissions to the sanatorium but an increase in clinic X-ray activity. It is stated that in the future more emphasis will be placed on out-patient treatment and less on in-patient hospitalization.

During the year, Sunny

Hill Sanatorium was given full accreditation by the Hospital Joint Board of accreditation sponsored by the American Hospital association. This is the highest achievement obtainable.

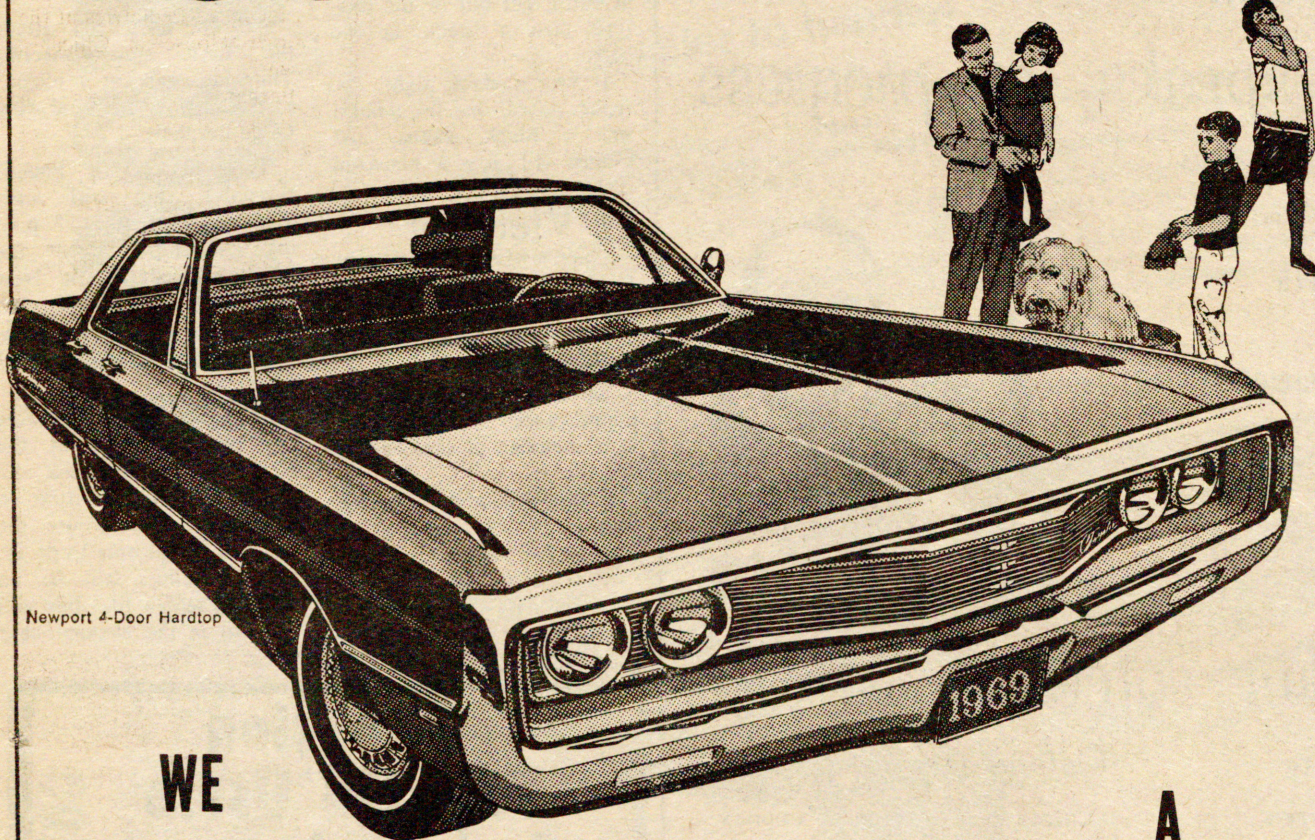

"A well-earned vacation is soon well-spent."

The clean machine.

Your modern electric heating system hates dirt.

Maybe electric heat'll never replace the cleaning lady. But it can give her a lot less to do.

Because, unlike flame-systems, modern electric heat doesn't use up air. So it doesn't cause a draft that constantly draws in dirty air from outside.

Which means things stay cleaner. With modern electric heat—dust and grime just don't build up on windowsills, walls, and furniture.

The cost? About $200 a year for an average 6-room house with proper insulation. And, believe us, it's worth it.

You'll miss the money a lot less than the dirt.

Death Likes The Dark Traffic Reports Show

The mileage death rate for night traffic accidents is three times greater than during the day, says the Chicago Motor Club.

This means that even though people drive less at night, accidents go up when the sun goes down.

These facts have a particular significance at this time of year as most Mid-western communities prepare to return to Central

Limit Hours For Tricks And Treats

Activities of youngsters on "tricks or treats" missions will be limited in area communities to the hours of 4 to 8 o'clock this evening.

Because of early darkness village authorities would like to have children off the streets by 8 o'clock.

Standard Time at 2 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 27. Turning back the clocks means darkness comes an hour earlier and twilight and nightfall will come during the critical pedestrian and vehicle rush hour period.

But both drivers and pedestrians can take special precautions to avoid accidents. Drivers can slow down and walkers can wear or carry something white or light colored.

The value of pedestrians wearing white has been demonstrated by an Indiana University study in which dummies were dressed first in black, then gray and then white. The dummies were placed next to a road.

Participating test drivers failed to see 14 per cent of the black dressed dummies at 20 m.p.h. at night. When the dummies were dressed in gray, they were seen by all drivers at speeds up to 30 m.p.h., but 53 per cent were not seen at 40 m.p.h.

White-clad dummies were seen by all drivers at speeds up to 50 m.p.h., by 97 per cent at 70 m.p.h. and by 53 per cent at 80 m.p.h.

Addition of reflectorized tape made all dummies visible to all drivers at speeds up to 80 m.p.h.

The Chicago Motor Club - AAA offers these additional suggestions for safer night driving:

--Reduce driving speed at night.

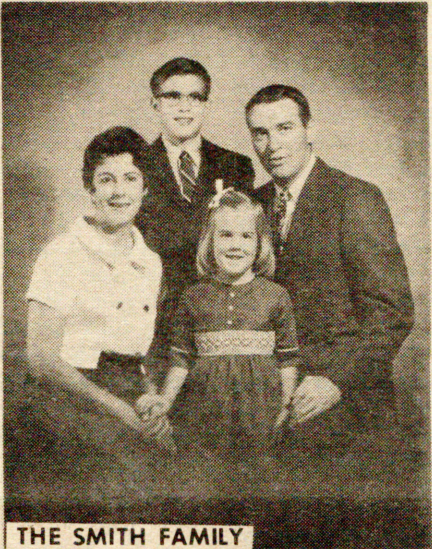

--Keep headlights and windshields clean to provide maximum visibility.

--Check tail lights, turn signals, backup lights and high and low beams to make sure they are working properly.

--Make allowances for your age. Recovery from glare takes longer for older drivers than for younger ones. Adjust your speed accordingly.

Funds are raised for youth and blind activities by the Palos Lions at such events as their Pancake Brunch to be held Nov. 9 at Carl Sandburg high school, 133rd and LaGrange Road starting at 7:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. As an example, disbursement of monies raised at their recent candy sale include one-third for the Lead-er Dog Program; one-third for the Hadley School for the Blind, and one-third for blind activities including the Recording For the Blind, Inc., in the Orland Plaza.

Other monies raised by the Lions are given back to the community in the form of support of various youth activities such as the Carl Sandburg P.T.A. College Loan Fund, and the Conference on Values which is a community wide project of the Palos/Orland area that will focus in on the conflicts in values between adults and young people.

The Conference is also supported thru the efforts, time and energy of the Orland - Palos P.T.A.'s, area churches, the Palos Youth Commission, the Palos Park Women's Club, Carl Sandburg high school, up to and including forty local civic organizations.

The Conference on Values will be held at Carl Sandburg high school, Nov. 17 from 1:30 to 8:00 p.m. and will feature Dr. Robert Grant as a resource person. Also on the agenda are small group discussions and seminars. A box dinner and dancing for the teens later in the evening are included in the ticket price of $1.50 for adults and $1.25 for teens.

Mustangs Defeat Knights

At home or away doesn't appear to make much difference as far as the Lincoln-Way varsity gridders winning chances are concerned. The Knights traveled to Evergreen Park last Saturday where they wound up on the short end of a 27-7 score.

The contest began on a happy note for the Knights. The Mustangs won the toss and elected to receive. On the kickoff the Evergreens fumble and Tom Mangun recovered on the hosts' 21-yard line. Six plays later Larry Martin went over from the one and Vaughn Karkos' boot for the extra point was good.

Lincoln-Way held the lead until the second quarter. Evergreen scored about the middle of the first quarter. With the help of two off-side penalties the host school marched down the field with Jeff Sader going over from the three but the attempt for the extra point failed and the visitors still led 7 to 6.

Late in the second quarter a 70 yard punt by George Latsis of the Mustangs put the Knights back deep in their territory. Martin fumbled and Latsis recovered the ball on the 15-yard line. Three plays later the Mustangs' Sader went over from the one. This time the kick was good and Evergreen led 13 to 7. The victors added two more touchdowns in the last period.

FORTY-FOUR LITTLE Brownies from Homewood Troops 12 and 193 recently were the guests of the Conquistador Farms in Orland Park for an afternoon of horseback riding and fun. The day's activities included a tour of the ranch at 135th and Wolf road, discussions about the types and breeds of horses, a short trail ride and concluded with a corral campfire. Head wrangler Mike Johnson, has made available the ranch to scouting groups in the area for field trips or to meet qualifications for merit badges.

Illinois Traffic Losses Hit 1/3 Billion Dollars

Death, injury and property losses in traffic in Illinois during calendar 1967, established an appalling new high record over a third of a billion dollars. Insurance companies writing auto lines in this state settled or are settling the bulk of these claims directly and only 1.7 per cent, or about $6 millions, of incurred losses went to claimants as a result of law suits in the court term covering approximately the same period.

Illinois Insurance Information Service data, collated from reports from all companies writing automobile lines in Illinois, show that total incurred losses in this state in 1967 increased at a rate of more than $2 millions per month.

Total incurred losses were as follows:

Stock Companies
$222,051,412
Mutual Companies
$121,817,963
Reciprocal Companies
$ 18,574,739

Total incurred auto losses for 1967 were $362,444,114. Reynolds said this figure compares with total incurred losses of $336,584,593 in calendar 1966 -- an increase in a single year of over $25,859,521 or better than $2 millions each month of the year.

Unless the present accident and inflationary trends are somehow arrested, total incurred automobile insurance losses in Illinois in the present calendar 1968 may well reach $390 millions of dollars, the information service said.

On the other hand, Reynolds said, only the merest fraction of this massive replacement of personal losses became involved in the courts. "Our Illinois Jury Verdict Reports, reflecting experience in the 102 Illinois counties during the 1966-67 court term which ended last August, show the following," he said:

Downstate Traffic Case Verdicts - $2,470,344, or, seven-tenths of one per cent of total incurred losses.

Cook County Traffic Case Verdicts - $3,764,354, or, 1.04 per cent of total incurred losses.

Statewide Traffic Case Verdicts - $6,234,698, for a statewide average of 1.7 per cent of total incurred losses.

"Much of the criticism of our industry has centered on court delays -- especially in Cook county where the backlog is massive," Reynolds said. "But these figures show clearly that the criticism is built around only a slight splinter of the total problem. Year in and year out our companies settle claims and losses by the hundreds of thousands, and despite the Cook county backlog, only a fraction of claims ever reach the courts or are tried to verdict."

"When cases are tried to verdict in Cook county and Illinois generally, juries over the past five years have been rejecting approximately one-half of claims as without merit. Most of those cases which our companies try to verdict are those which we are compelled to take to the courts under our commitment to defend the people who buy our policies."

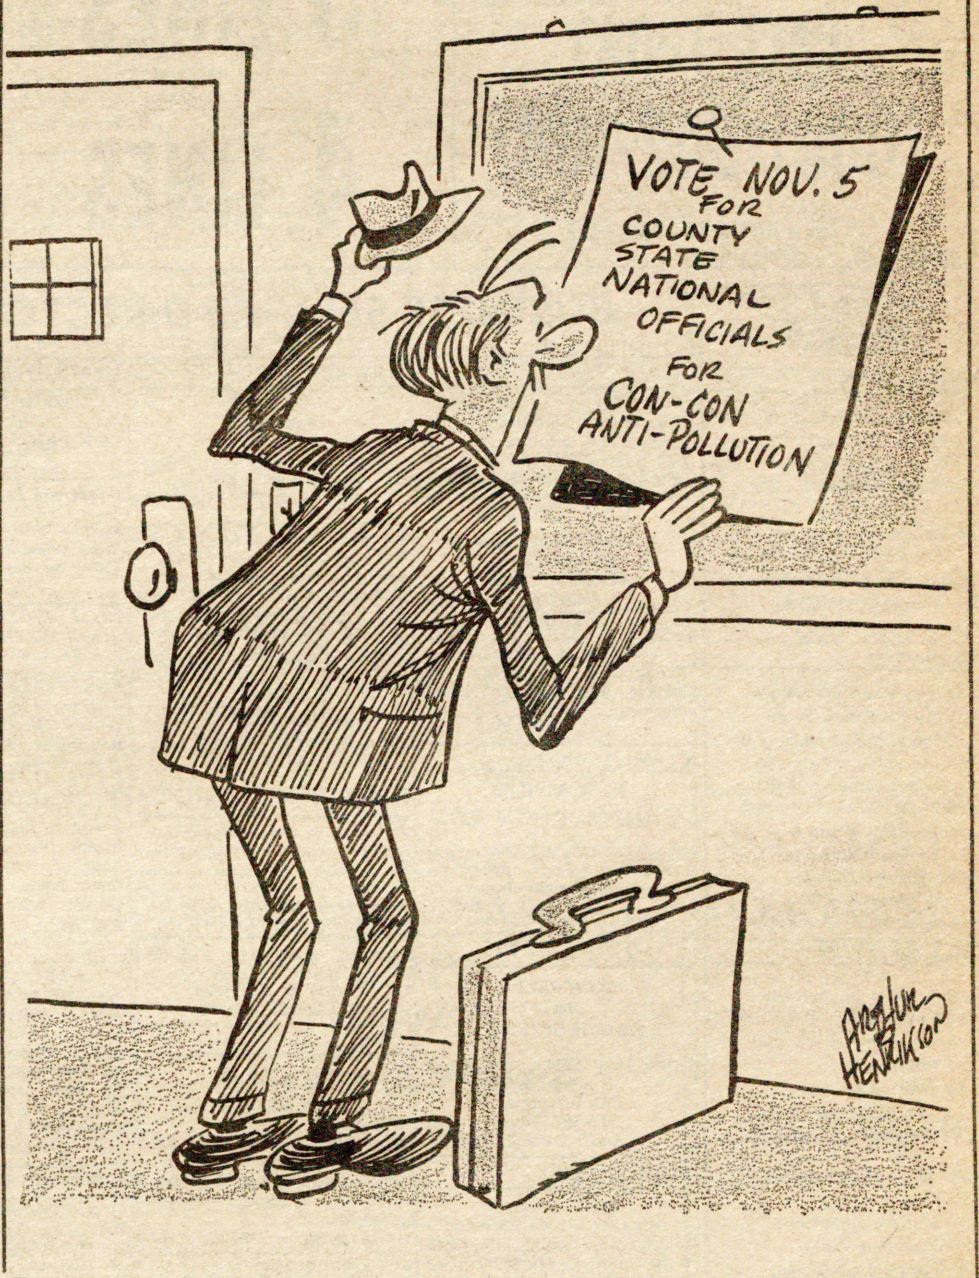

"Pure incurred losses eat up nearly 60 cents of the premium dollar in Illinois. An additional 13 to 15 cents of the premium dollar is consumed by expenses assumed in behalf of the policy buyer -- investigations, defense counsel, expert medical testimony and other services necessary for settling claims."

"Add to that, operating expenses approximating 27 to 30 cents out of the premium dollar, and it readily may be seen why most auto underwriters operating in Illinois ended 1967 with final statutory underwriting results in the red ink."

"But the real thrust of these data is the demonstration that the insurance industry is the best friend of the courts in keeping the tremendous weight of thousands of claims out of litigation by efficient, direct and quick settlements which result in satisfaction to all concerned," Reynolds said.

The striking colors of autumn should be as vivid as ever in most areas of the county this year. Less fortunate are areas in central New England where the drought robbed trees of moisture. There, colors may not be as spectacular this year.

What we need for brilliant autumn display are bright sunny days and moderately cool nights. If, however, the days are overcast and rainy the yellows and browns, not the intense reds and purples, will be the dominant colors. Frost has nothing to do with painting fall colors . . . in fact frost can dull autumn foliage.

Other factors, too, affect the fall colors . . . for instance, the species of tree, or its location, or even soil condition. Within a species of tree, some individuals are general manager said that the casualty industry is being particularly hard hit this year, as was the case in 1967, by the impact of inflation -- increasing costs of healing humans injured in traffic accidents and repairing and replacing property smashed on streets and highways. The average cost per claim has been on a steadily upward curve for the last five years, Reynolds said, adding that the inflationary trend seems to be accelerating rather than slowing down.

more brilliant than others. Here's a rundown of which Cook County trees produce what colors.

When you see a brilliant crimson to winey red tree, it's probably a red maple. Bright to brilliant scarlet would belong to the scarlet oak. Red oak produces dark red to russet foliage and Sassafras is orange to scarlet. The really bright oranges come from one tree, the sugar maple. It's the most colorful tree of all, combining orange with clear yellows and rich crimson.

The golden hues could be radiating from the aspen, the tulip tree, the ironwood or the lesser known yellowwood. The yellows belong to the ginkgos and redbuds and to the birch which produces a soft, clear yellow.

The mountain ash and white ash add a touch of purple to the landscape and the pin oaks and hickories give the entire scene a rich, burnished look with their browns and ambers.

All trees and shrubs that mature their wood early can be planted in the fall. This includes oaks and maples. You can plant larch in the fall too since it starts growth early in the spring. The best time to plant is while the soil is still warm. Some new growth will have a chance to start before the weather gets too cold.

The most important thing to remember when planting trees in the fall is to give them plenty of water. It takes a lot of water to be certain you'll get good plant establishment.
